Software

S-Score

Developed an implementation of the S-Score algorithm (L Zhang et al., J Mol Biol 2002: 317, 225-235) for analysis of Affymetrix microarray files using probe level data using the R programming environment. Accepted to Bioconductor developer version 1.8, November 29, 2005.

TRANSCRIPT

Developed a structured language for specifying graduation requirements and implemented a prototype system for comparing student transcripts to the university undergraduate bulletin to determine if requirements were met. In fulfillment for the requirements for the B.A. in Computer Science, University of Mississippi. Client: Glenn Hopkins, Ph.D., Dean, College of Liberal Arts, University of Mississippi, 1990.

Spectrophotometer Control System

Developed a prototype system for the automated performance of biochemical quenching experiments and collection of multichannel spectrophotometric data. This integrated system included software for a computer-controlled syringe for delivery of quencher, a modifiable control script generator for a multichannel spectrophotometer, and linking to a modified version of GLOBALS UNLIMITED for nonlinear least squares analysis. The development of this system was funded by NSF grant DIR 88-20621(MR Eftink, PI) and briefly described in MR Eftink, Fluorescence Quenching: Theory and Applications, in JR Lakowicz, Topics in Fluorescence Spectroscopy, Volume 2 (2002), p. 177. The software served as a basis for the SCANTW (G Ramsay & MR Eftink, Biophys J 1994: 31, 516-523) and AAP (G Ramsay et al., Biophys J 1995: 69, 701-707) software. Client: Maurice R. Eftink, Associate Professor of Chemistry, University of Mississippi, 1989-1990.
